The authors and the publisher would like to draw your attention to the following errors in the above-mentioned article that were identified after its publication. These errors arose during the final manuscript preparation and production stages.

The corrections are listed below for clarity:

1) Location: Methods Section, subsection “Cell Lines”

The following sentence has been added: “The normal human ovarian epithelial cell lines IOSE386 and IOSE80 were kindly provided by Dr. Xu Juan (Women's Hospital of Nanjing Medical University, China).”

2) Location: Figure 2

Panel C, y-axis label: EdU% (中文) – corrected as “EdU Proportion”

Panel C, EdU image: The published image contained an assembly error.

Correction: The image has been replaced with the correctly assembled version from the original dataset to accurately represent the experimental data.

3) Location: Figure 6

Panel D, EdU image: The published image contained an assembly error.

Correction: The image has been replaced with the correctly assembled version from the original dataset to accurately represent the experimental data.

4) Location: Supplementary Figure S4

These errors have now been corrected with the appropriate Figures shown below.
